MERCHANTS OPPOSE DAYLIGHT SAVING

There was the usual large attendance at the meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association last Wednesday night, and several matters of interest came before the organiation for approval or rejection, among them being the proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 7, generally known as the daylight saving law.

State Senator Maloney, of San Francisco, appeared before the body and vigorously opposed the amendment. The Merchants' Association concluded that the present condition is satisfactory, and could see no reason for any such change. It, therefore, went on record as being opposed to the amendment.

The next proposition was the proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 18, and Mr. H. E. Boomer, of the San Francisco assessors' office, spoke in favor of the amendment, but the association deferred action on the ground that there was not sufficient information before the association on the subject.

Mr. C. F. Covel, manager of the Daly City Theatre, spoke on the baby contest now being conducted by the Daly City Theatre as a matter of interest, both individually and collectively, to the merchants, and the organization unanimously endorsed the contest.

After transacting a large volume of routine business, among which was the usual number of complaints upon various matters in and about the city, the nomination of officers for the ensuing year was taken up, and the following named persons were named for office:

For President, Andrew Vireno.

For Vice-President, Peter Pavlos.

For Recording Secretary, W. H. Clay.

For Financial Secretary-Treasurer, John J. Fahey.

For Sergeant at Arms, J. Plansky.

The next regular meeting will be held November 5, at the City Hall auditorium, at which time the election of officers will be in order.

All merchants, business and professional men are cordially invited to attend these meetings.

W. H. CLAY,
Recording Secretary.

He truly deserves great credit for his success at his early age, as he won't be twenty-one years old till October 12. MERCHANTS' NINE IN WINTER LEAGUE

BY HAROLD MARTIN

The Daly City baseball team has been entered in the Class "A" Spalding winter league. The local Merchants' Association advanced a $50 forfeit fee at a meeting held September 3, which will start this representative aggregation on a quest for the city championship.

Thirteen high-class teams applied for membership to the league, and after much discussion one club was eliminated and from the remainder two well balanced divisions, known as American and National, of six teams each, were selected.

The local nine drew an American league franchise. The other five teams in this group are Mission Reds, Olympic Florists, O'Brien, Spotorno & Mitchell, Glen Park Merchants and Napa Soda Thirties. The National division is compoosed of the following clubs: Selig Bros., Castro Natives, Walworth California, Portola Natives, Boldemann Chocolate and Utopia Natives.

Daly City will open the season by playing the Mission Reds Sunday, and will oppose Olympic Florists the following week. Both of these teams have enviable records and according to dope should finish close to the top.

Manager Ed Cavagnaro will put a colorful array of talent on the field against all comers. Daly City has one of the best batteries in the league, Keagle and Strand. The infielders, Sloan, Toole, Assalino, Rettig and Doyle, have been playing good ball; while Aiello, Plansky and Cruchoff are a dependable bunch of outfielders.

The league will have ended in ten weeks, weather permitting. Each team will play their schedule twice. Daly City opposes the clubs in the following order: Mission Reds, Olympic Florists, O'Brien, Spotorno & Mitchell, Glen Park Merchants and Napa Soda Thirties. The winner of each division plays a series for the city championship after the schedules are completed.

SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE VACCINATED

On Thursday, September 18, 130 children of the General Pershing school were vaccinated for immunization against smallpox. This work was made possible by the efforts of Dr. F. P. Callsen, of the Daly City Health Department, and the school nurse, Mrs. E. Lohr. A quantity of vaccine and supplies are being provided by the Board of Health for this purpose.

The aim of the health department is to have all school children vaccinated this school term, so that it will only be necessary to treat the incoming pupils each year. This method is intended to make the immunization problem a systematic and efficient procedure.

INDIANS' ELEVEN WINS CLOSE GAME

The Jefferson high school eleven advanced one step closer to the "B" division championship of the Peninsula Athletic League, last Friday, defeating their ancient rivals, South San Francisco, 7 to 0, on the local gridiron.

A sensational punt return by Gerald Harper in the fourth quarter produced Jefferson's touchdown. Harper received the ball on South City's 30 yard line and ran through the entire team for a tally. He was stopped momentarily on three occasions, but managed to wiggle out in superb style.

Previous to the scoring play the Indians had worked the pigskin from their own 24 yard line to within one step of the final marker, only to lose possession by a few inches on the fourth down. Four completed passes that gained 40 yards aided Jefferson in this march down the field.

The local gridders played another high class defensive game to keep their goal line uncrossed. The boilermakers were credited with eight first downs and gained a total of 105 yards; but were helpless against Jefferson's strong resistance within 20 yards of the goal. They passed this mark only once.

Jefferson's offence was very spotty, due to the absence of Belli, left half. He broke several bones in his foot playing against Half Moon Bay. Despite this fact three other members of the backfield gained more yardage than South City and succeeded in moving the yard-sticks a greater number of times. Kalinen advanced the ball 73 yards in 17 plays, So Relle 54 in 12 attempts and Harper 10 in 5. Together they made 10 first downs.

NORTH END SEWER GIVEN APPROVAL

San Mateo county's new $126,000 sewer project to serve Lomita Park, San Bruno, South San Francisco and all the unincorporated area lying between, was formally approved last Tuesday by the San Mateo county board of supervisors after two protests had been heard and overruled.

The new sewer will fill a long felt need in the northern end of the county, according to Robert Klassen, city engineer of the two cities. For years sewage from the southerly end of South San Francisco has been emptying into a creek near the Bayshore boulevard and been carried into the bay. The new system will eliminate this, and also the very unpleasant odor that has annoyed the bayshore section for years.

The new sewer line will service the communities named above and instead of emptying the sewage along the bayshore will carry it far out into the bay, where tides will wash it out to sea. This area has long been in need of such a system, Mr. Klassen said, and one of the most commendable features will be the elimination of the odors that have made certain parts of the area almost uninhabitable.

The next step, according to Mr. Klassen, will be the call for bids on the construction of the system. He said that work on the project would probably be started in a month's time.

Supervisor C. V. Thompson presided after an absence of many weeks, due to an operation. Dr. Thompson received the congratulations of the board upon his recovery.

BOARD AUTHORIZES MILLS FIELD WORK

The San Francisco board of supervisors have approved three ordinances authorizing construction work at the Mills field. Among other things there will be a lot of necessary paving done and a channel dug from the bay into the field so as to permit the passage of boats into the new field.

This will be especially useful, Captain Roy Francis, superintendent, said, for the landing of seaplanes. It is quite likely that the field will maintain a motor boat for the removal of seaplane passengers, according to Captain Francis.

Other construction work will include the extension of certain hangars so as to provide greater housing space for planes.

COUPLE AGAIN DENIED CUSTODY OF TWO SONS

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ricci, of San Bruno, have been denied the custody of their two sons, the youthful violin prodigies, and they will remain with their guardian, Miss Elizabeth Lackey, formerly of Berkeley. Ruggierko, 12 years old, and Giorgio, 10, were given into the custody of Miss Lackey by the Alameda county Superior court several years ago, to further their musical education. The elder boy won world fame and his talent was found, too, in his younger brother. They have made small fortunes.

"DEITY OF JESUS" IS PASTOR'S THEME

"Who is He?" the pastor of Grace Presbyterian church will discuss this most astounding question of all time. Surely a question upon which the destiny of the human race rests is a question worth investigatinng. At 7:45 P. M., when this sermon will be delivered, the Communion will also be observed.

Sunday, October 12, Rally Day, will be observed in the Sunday school. This service will be held at 10 A. M., and will be in charge of the Sunday school. Bible dramas and recitations will be the order and a most interesting hour is anticipated. Strangers are always especially welcome.

MOTION PICTURES PRESENTED AT CALVARY BAPTIST CHAPEL

Rev. Charles Woessner, pastor of Calvary Baptist Chapel, 5724 Mission street, announces that services for next Sunday will be as follows:

Sermon in the morning, "A Message on the Communion Service." Sermon in the evening, "The Atonement."

Four reels of motion pictures will be shown; one at the 9:45 Church school hour, and three at 6:30 hour.

An interesting B. Y. P. U. program has been planned in the various societies. Calvary Chapel carries on very excellent B. Y. P. U. activities. It has a society for all ages.

At the weekly prayer service which meets each Wednesday night, the pastor is taking the congregation through the Book of Galations. Much interest has been shown for this Bible study has met with a continued increase in attendance. The public as a whole is invited to attend, irrespective of creed. The main purpose of the study is to create a thirst for things spiritual and to gain a more thorough knowledge of the contents of the Bible. No one would condemn Shakespeare without having read Shakespeare; yet millions deny the authenticity of the Bible when they themselves do not know the difference between one book from the other, or that the Epistles might have been the wives of the Apostles. Ignorance worse than this abounds with those who have deliberately condemned a Volume which they themselves have never studied or read. Biblically man will be judged by three books: The Book of Life; whether or no man's name is written there. It is a question if he has accepted or rejected Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour. The next book is the Book of Records. Scripturally in this book are recorded the works or deeds man has performed in the name of Jesus Christ. And the last book is the Book of Standards, which is the Bible. There are certain things which are always good, regardless if a few would condemn them which is due mainly because of their own irregular lives. The Bible is indeed a Book of Standards and when man will stand before God alone some day the specifications and requirements will be read to him. Ignorance of this Book is truly no excuse in this day of intellectual enlightenment and educational advantages. No more so than ignorance of the law is in the state of California. Man's own willingness to remain ignorant is his own condemnation. God is real; again and again through His Book He cries "Try Me." "Prove Me and know that I am God!" God warns us specifically through these words: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsover a man soweth that shall he reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."

SMART SHOP EXTENDS BUSINESS SOUTHWARD

Right from the first the Smart Shop in the Daly City Theatre building won the hearts of the fair ones of this immediate vicinity. The popularity in the community of the daintily appointed home of modes has grown by leaps and bounds until it can truly be called a complete success.

Now a wonderful thing has come to pass. The fame of the Smart Shop has spread beyond the borders of Daly City. Through the enthusiastic comment of satisfied customers, girls and women have been attracted from San Francisco on the one side and the peninsula towns on the other.

It is becoming quite the thing for folks on the way to Burlingame, San Mateo, and other flourishing centers, to drop into the Smart Shop for a gown or hat either on the way to the big city or on the way home. Day by day business of that surprising kind is increasing. The mothers and daughters of Daly City are justly taking upon themselves some of the credit for broadcasting the news of the beautiful products of the arts of milliner and moodiste to be obtained at the Smart Shop.

We wish to express our kindest appreciation to the many friends who were so kind to us during the serious illness of our father, Mr. Shelton Allen, and for the many beautiful floral offerings you sent at his burial.
Most sincerely yours,
MRS. J. A. WILLIAMS.
MRS. SUE POWELL.
MR. WILLIAM C. ALLEN.

FACTIONS

There's more to that story than you can get in the first glance.

Have you ever seen a tougher looking hen? Not tough in the sense that she would take four hours of good houswifely boiling, but exasperated and more than a little peeved at the attitude of the egg, who looks like he thought he had won the age-old argument.

And have you ever seen a cockier looking egg? He is pretty sure that the majority of the citizens of Daly City are agreeing with him, and therefore cannot help but crow a bit.

And note the question mark between them. It is a definite dividing line. It is there particularly to mark off the one from the other.

Now about our town. The illustration wasn't meant to picture it, but doesn't it remind us of factions that inevitable arise in nearly every town? Is there a "Hen" faction, belligerently standing off and eyeing an "Egg" faction with so much an air of disdain? Is the "Hen" faction independent, going its own way, and the "Egg" faction in turn going its own way with the "Question Mark" between them?

Or do they, like the famous subjects of the illustration, keep right on doing business as usual in the same old stand?

If they do, and if the big argument about progressive moves is not WHO THOUGHT OF THEM, and WHO STARTED THEM, and WHOM IN PARTICULAR THEY WILL BENEFIT, but HOW SOON they can be put INTO EFFECT, then we can still get a laugh out of the old "Hen and Egg" debate. BUT if there are separate factions, and the emblem of one is a Hen and the emblem of the other is an Egg, and if they continue to argue about which came first, or which is supreme, or any other argument, it hurts our town. If so, the lesson taught by the Hen in keeping laying eggs right through the most stormy argument, and the moral taught by the Egg of co-operating to the extent of hatching more hens and building up the odds against himself has been lost.

"Whose side are you on, Mister; the Hen's side or the Egg's side?"

"Why, I don't care much which, Friend, as long as I have something to go with my ham in the morning."

And that's the way it should be in this town.

STATE FORESTER OUTLINES FIRE PREVENTION POLICY

Education in fire prevention for those who are wililng to be educated, and strict law enforcement for those who are not willing to learn, is the policy guiding the foresters in their efforts to protect the timber and watersheds of California, according to a statement by M. B. Pratt, State Forester, received by the California State Automobile Association. Pratt is also chairman of the Stop Forest Fires Committee of California.

"Silly time is here—cigarettes are being thrown from automobiles," said Pratt. "The green hills have changed to brown, yet many motorists go on throwing burning matches and tobacco to imperil our fields and forests. They fail to realize that the practice, while safe in winter when the roads are wet and the grass green, constitutes a great menace to the natural resources of California during the dry season.

"Foresters have repeatedly pointed out the great loss due to fires caused in this way. The combined Federal and State report for 1929 showed that smokers headed the list of fire causes in California with responsibility for 1,631 out of a total of 4,803 fires. A review of the records since 1922, when careless smoking was first segregated from the other causes of fires in this state, show that there has been an increase of 238 per cent in this class of fires.

"The California legislature was one of the first to make it unlawful to throw burning material from moving vehicles. Judging from the unprecedented fire season in the eastern states this year, the predominant cause of which was traceable to smokers, other states will follow California's lead in this regard.

"Many people can not be educated except with drastic measures and for that purpose the State and Nation have provided fire laws and regulations with teeth in them and rangers with plenty of backbone to enforce them.

"Fire prevention pertains just as much to brush as to timber areas, since both are invaluable for watershed purposes. The prosperity of the state is dependent upon its water supply, which is conserved through the cover in the mountain country."

Mrs. Rose Schwartz and 21 lady friends agree that Mr. Schwartz is New York's poorest sport. He reported that they were playing poker in his home and all were arrested, but released for want of sufficient evidence to warrant prosecution.

A two-way telephone system has been established on a fast moving train between Montreal and Toronto operated by the Canadian National railway.

A man's true worth probably lies somewhere between his own estimate and that of other people.

The war memorial on Stone Mountain should also include a scene depicting the war over carving it.

A prison baseball nine beat Washington police, 13 to 6. Probably through greater skill in base stealing.

It is estimated that there are now 75,000 miniature golf courses in the country.

"Will?" she said at last gently, but he did not answer. She went around and stood beside him, looking down at him. He was asleep. His eyes and brow were hidden by the fold of his arm, but his wide mouth, his mobile, sensitive, excited mouth was in repose. Where had she seen that droop before? It was Elaine's. It was the gentle enduring fold of her mouth, when she had been little and sick so much, and had borne it all with such remarkable patience. Will's mouth was like that. Not in cut or form, but in the line of its expression. Will was bearing something. He was sick. He was enduring. Ernestine felt herself lost in a dark wood. Fiercely, passionately, she buried in herself her personal resentment and pain. She must find a way out for all of them. If she could see what to do! If something would show her the way!

Next morning Will ate his breakfast and went out, his manner more normal that it had been of late. He kissed her cheek, and said to her:

"Was I rough last night, kitten? You're pale. Sorry. I left the money in your desk drawer. Use it. It's all for you and the children, anyhow."

"Thanks, Will," she said indifferently, for now she did not care about the money at all. "Do you know anything about Loring and Lillian? We've not seen them for days. I've been spring housecleaning, and haven't even phoned her. I tried to get her just now, and no one answered."

"I think Loring and Pastano are having some trouble," said Will. "I saw Ruby a day or two ago, and he was black in the face about something Loring tried to put over on him. He'll be hard, if he gets turned against your brother-in-law. I'll call Loring at his office today, and see if I can find out what's up. Well, so long. I'm late."

Ernestine was busy with her family and household all morning, but with a sense of troubled foreboding in her heart. She went to the phone two or three times, but could not get Lillian's house nor Loring's office.

"Funny thing Lillian's maid isn't at home," she thought, but no one answered the prolonged ring at the other house. Ernestine went on about her work, and at eleven o'clock, Molly called her to the phone.

"Hello," said Ernestine.

It was a woman's voice, crisp, young and businesslike.

"Mrs. Will Todd?"

"Yes."

"This is the Van Hueten Clark Street Savings bank calling. Could you come down here right away?"

"Why—I don't know. Why should I?"

"I'm afraid I can't tell you that. You're to come here for a private conference. I believe it's important."

"Why, yes," said Ernestine. "I can come. But I don't understand. There's not a run on the bank, is there? I've all my savings—"

"Oh, no," said the cheerful voice. "Nothing like that, I assure you. Can you be here about ten minutes of twelve? The doorman will take you to the private office."

"Well," said Ernestine, "it all seems very mysterious, but I'll come. I'll be there at ten to twelve."

"Thank you, Mrs. Todd. And, please, I was to ask you to come by the Clark street car, and leave the car at Ontario street, instead of coming in your own car."

The crisp voice was disconnected. Ernestine put the receiver in place wonderingly. Well, there was no answer to her questions until she was there.

She left the street car at Ontario street and walked south. The doorman at the bank greeted her with a stiff nod, left his place and walked back through the big downstairs room. Ernestine followed him. He paused at the foot of the wide stairs that led to the balcony.

"The last door, on the left side of the balcony," he said to her in a low voice, and Ernestine went up the stairs, half frightened with this secrecy, walked forward again, toward the street, passed indifferent employees and opened an unmarked door, entered a private office, and closed the door behind her.

Ruby Pastano was standing by the green-curtained windows, looking down into the street through a tiny slit he held open with his finger. He turned to her.

"Ernestine!"

"Mr. Pastano!" She did not know whether she was relieved or more frightened. At least, here was some one familiar.

"Will you shake hands with me?"

He came to her, big, sober, non-committal and offered her his hand. Ernestine laid her hand in his big thick palm and noticed, as she did so, how extraordinarily long his fingers were, as he took her hand in both of his.

"I've been wondering, all the way over here, who it was that had sent for me," she said nervously. "I did not expect to see you—I don't know what I expected. I had a dreadful dream last night, and I've been frightened and nervous all day."

"Sit down, won't you?" the voice, silky, soft, as always, had in it a note of gentleness that went to Ernestine's heart, in spite of her formed and set prejudices against Ruby Pastano.

He drew up for her a chair upholstered in red pigskin, and she sat down, upright, ready for flight, on the edge of it. He seated himself before her on the empty desk.

"I didn't want you to come to my office, and I didn't want to go to your home, but I felt that I had to see you, Ernestine," he said gently, "do you believe that I am Will's friend?"

Ernestine felt that the occasion was momentous. She felt herself thrust back from the ordinary conventional judgments of her class and generation to something more fundamental. She answered naturally, honestly:

"Yes," she said, "yes, I do."

"Good," he said. "I've not done many unselfish things in my life, although I've done plenty that were dangerous—but for my own gain. But I'm going to do something for you now. I'm going to give you a chance to do something for somebody else. All last night I couldn't sleep, knowing that the plans that are coming forward today would hurt you. I knew that I must work some change if it were possible. I wanted to take into account the existence of little Ernestine, knowing that I must at least give her her chance. . . ."

"What do you mean, Ruby?' she asked, her thoughts turning to Will. How could he be involved with this man? He had never had any contact with Pastano except the free contact of friendship. He had never had a favor from him.

"No," he said, reading her thought, "not Will—but Loring—your sister's husband, Loring Hamilton. Did you know that he is ruined?"

"Loring—ruined? But how?"

"He will tell you, if he is fool enough to talk, that I have ruined him. I tell you that he ruined himself. He's in debt, he's in trouble, and he's under the shadow of an indictment—for bribing witnesses, in federal court—serious business, Ernestine."

"You mean—the grand jury? But how did this happen? Tell me, please."

"I cannot tell you everything. It's a long story, and involved, and, besides, it is unwise and unnecessary. I can give you a few facts. A week ago today your brother-in-law was secure. His security was dependent on his obedience. He had placed himself deliberately in a position where he had to do as he was told, in return for all that he had—and wanted. A week ago he decided to take a step that had been in his mind for some time. I knew that it was there. I was expecting it. Loring decided that he would break faith with me, cash in on his knowledge and cut the ties. He was thirsting for the water that he carried, but could not drink."

He paused, and the red of old anger burned in his cheeks.

"I held notes on him as security for business that he transacted through his office—properties I could not afford to have in my name. He thought I would not dare to sell his notes, he having so much information about me. No use going into the ugly details. He woke up too late to find out that his transactions were with me—the company he was dealing with was mine—he sold my property to me. It was I who bought from him what he had no right to sell. I stopped payment on the checks he held, I had his notes, and he was holding—the bag."

"But how could you? That's not right. You couldn't do that."

"Why not?" asked Pastano. "I was cleverer than he. What could he do? What could he say? I called in his notes. Either he had to pay me, or I would sell them to his bank for discount. He put in his stone stock—sound property—and recovered his notes. Then he found all his debts due on the same day. He lost seventeen accounts in one afternoon—business taken right out of his office. He sold his car and yesterday he mortgaged his house. And today—unless it's stopped—he's going to be indicted."

Ernestine got to her feet.

"But, Ruby—how can you do this to Loring? He does know things about you—"

"Very little," answered Pastano evenly. "Fragments—nothing whole. Part of this deal—part of that. His own activities will shine much worse in court than his connections with me. Do you think I am fool enough to put myself in jeopardy with a man like Loring?"

Ernestine made a little moan, and he began to speak quickly, vehemently, with a strange sternness and justice in his face.

"He came to me—he sought the connection—he was eager for any work. He offered to do things for me that I wouldn't let him do. He was well paid, and he didn't play the game. His fees were big—business was thrown to him from a dozen directions inaccessible to him five years ago. He sat where he wanted to sit—in the lap of city politics, and he grew weary of his mistress. He wished to exploit her—desert her. So he schemed and planned. But you cannot get into the whirlpool and then out again—"

Ernestine, looking at him, felt the sucking breath of the vortex. "But what have I to do with this?" she asked. "What can I do for Loring? You haven't told me this without some purpose."

"First let me show you why I can do nothing for him myself—it is easier to start a landslide than to stop it. It was my intention—no, my determination—to ruin him, to have him debarred, disgraced, sent to the penitentiary, if I could. It seemed necessary. Here, all about me, are these young men—lieutenants—gangsters, if you like the newspaper word better. They are my army. We must have loyalty in any army. We must have obedience. Loyalty and obedience, first, because they have confidence in me, that I am wise, that I will take care of them while they stay with me, that I am competent to meet all situations. But if a man is disloyal, all the rest must see what becomes of him. Loyalty, first, because of confidence; second, because of fear. When admiration fails, fear remains."

"He Was Well Paid, and He Didn't Play the Game."

"But you are not going to ruin Loring now?" she said eagerly. "You have changed your mind—you have some plan?"

"No," he said slowly, "no, not I. I have no plan to save Loring Hamilton. I have no desire to save him. I would not lift my little finger for Loring Hamilton. It is inevitable that he should fail, should be punished. Even if I wanted to do something for him now, I could not. His treachery is known to others as well as to myself. Money is needed. If I should withdraw money from my own private sources, or if I should withdraw money from funds that are available for gifts, when it is necessary, it would be instantly known. No—in the first place, I don't want to help Loring. If he were my own brother, I would feel that he must follow his course alone. Nor could I help him, even if I liked, but"—he looked at her intently so that for a moment it seemed that she was lost, hypnotized by his great dark eyes—"you can help him, if you like, Ernestine."

"Tell me," she whispered. "What can I do?"

He put his hand in his pocket and took out his big silver watch. Laying the flat of his palm upon it, he twisted it, unscrewed the back of the watch and took from between the outer and inner cases a small piece of paper, folded once across. He sat, his dismembered watch in one hand, and the piece of paper in the other, and said to her:

"I know that you have your own standards of honor—I have exposed myself, in this talk, knowing your code. But now, I must ask you if you are capable of secrecy. No one but Will must know of this. He must know."

"I promise," she said at once.

He put the folded paper in her hand, and kept his finger upon it, so that it remained closed.

"There is a name here. This afternoon, within an hour after this bank is closed—before four o'clock, to be exact, twenty thousand dollars, in cash, must be placed in the hands of this person, and the indictment against Loring will be dropped."

Ernestine was very pale. "A bribe?" she said, her throat dry. "But that's—wrong."

He was very gentle.

"Wrong, yes—no doubt. But we are at a place now—where it is the lesser evil, which must be chosen—not right or wrong. A bribe—ugly word. Yes, there is a regular scale of prices for indictments. This money must be spread. It will take twenty thousand dollars to do it. You have the money. I take a great risk upon myself—this talk, this name, this opportunity, but I wished you to have it."

He beamed upon her now—pleased as a child who has been good and waits for praise. Ernestine was very agitated.

"How do you know I have this money?"

"I am a director in this bank—you have it—here."

"But that money is for Will. I've been saving it for nearly two years. I can't give that money for Loring. It's Will's."

"I'll not pay for Loring," said Pastano sternly, and he shrugged, his face altered, hard. "Why should I? You can—if you won't, he's sunk—that's all."

"No, no," cried Ernestine, "not that—not Will's money. I won't do it, Ruby. I can't. Loring will have to go down in his own wreckage. Why should I pay a bribe for him? Why should I rob Will of his very chance, for Loring? This isn't just money—this is Will's future—his peace, his happiness—this is my marriage—this money."

He was silent. He stared at her. She could feel in him disappointment. He was disappointed in her! He, monster that he was, dared to judge her!

"You see," she said desperately, "Will isn't always going to be a cartoonist. He's going to do something else. He hasn't any sense about money. I learned about money, when we were poor, but Will has never learned. He's extravagant, foolish. I found out long ago that if he had fifty cents in his pocket, or fifty dollars, it was all the same to him. And then—I discovered that Will wanted to be an artist, that he wanted to work in colors, that he hated the cats. And I began to save. I've kept up a front on a small amount of money. I spent less than twelve thousand dollars last year, and Will earned thirty thousand. But it's been for Will. I'm not naturally economical, or close, but I did it for Will."

"Perhaps Will would want you to do this—ask him."

"Perhaps he would. It would be like him to throw away his chance for Loring. But Will doesn't know I've got this money. Nobody knows, except the bank clerks. I thought a savings account was a private matter. Will has a studio down near here—if he could study—if he could go to Paris."

"I know," said Pastano. "He rents his workroom from me. I've seen some of his stuff. Well—Loring can go to jail then, for all of me, and if you are subpenaed into court, to testify about things that happened at Langley lake three summers ago, don't say I didn't warn you."

He sighed. His eyes were sad and tired. The tears sprang down Ernestine's cheeks.

"Don't think I don't appreciate this—I know that you endanger yourself—your very life—by talking to me. I know enough about all this to know what you are doing—it's generous, but, oh, Ruby, it is Will I love—Will, all the time."

"Your sister—" he objected.

"Why should I sacrifice Will for Loring and Lillian?" she said passionately. "It will take me a long time to accumulate this money again. And simply to give it away—to send it out blindly, and not even know where it goes! Loring has always hated Will—has tried to harm him. And now you ask me to give up Will's chance. He can't wait forever. His gift will die, he'll go stale."

"Loring has loved you, Ernestine."

She stopped her incoherent speech. She looked at him with dark eyes, and her face grew very pale.

"That time," Pastano said, "when you were ill—when Elaine was born, we would not have found you, if it had not been for Loring."

"But Will found me," she quavered.

"Yes—after Loring had torn the town up—had organized a search—had warned me. Will would still be wandering about Sheridan Park. And after Will found you, what did he do? You might have died there, without proper care. It was Loring's practical energy and ability—his decision and his efficiency which saved you."

He got up and moved about restlessly. He seemed almost to plead with her.

"That's why I couldn't sleep last night. It came to me all the time—he loves our Ernestine, fool and traitor that he is. He would give everything he has—for her. It is her sister, her family, her family name. She is mixed in it—she will be hurt by it. So this morning, I came to town. I have seen the bank ledger from time to time. I have watched your private fortune growing with much interest, and known, or thought, that Will was ignorant of it. So this morning I came to town, and carefully I have made this possible. And now, you do not see it."

He was putting his watch together as he spoke, but he left the slip of paper in Ernestine's hand.

"It's one o'clock," he said. "The bank closes at three. Suppose you go and talk to Will. A woman ought not take a step like this, anyhow, without talking to her husband."

"I'm not going to give Will's money to Loring," Ernestine said despairingly.

Mr. Pastano opened the door for her, but did not answer her low "good-by."

Ernestine went swiftly down the stairs and out into the brightness of the street.

"I'm not going to ask Will," she thought stubbornly. "He'll just tell me to do what Pastano wants. I'm not going to do it."

She ran for a car going north and boarded it. She rode as far as Belmont avenue, jumped up suddenly and got out of the street car. A taxi stood before a drug store across the street. Ernestine ran across through the traffic and got into the taxi.

"Please hurry," she said, and gave him the address of the old office building near the river, where Will led his secret life.

She felt that she could not get to Will soon enough, now she was started. She paid the taxi driver at the door and went quickly into the dim and dusty doorway.

Hosiery of Mixed Colors Fad of Centuries Ago

The bright-colored hose worn in the Fourteenth century roused the ire of even Chaucer, who declares that "the wrapping of their hose which are deported of two colors, white and red, white and black, or black and red and white and blue, make the wearers seem as though the Fire of St. Anthony or other such mischance had cankered and consumed one-half of their bodies."

The fashion of wearing two colors, "which rendered uncertain the fellowship of the legs," continued in spite of the ridicule and satire of the poets and chroniclers, until the middle of the Sixteenth century.

The long hose or herlots worn by persons of quality at the time were made of the finest cloth or velvet, and there is record of Henry III ordering three pairs for his sister Isabella, which were to be of velvet embroidered with gold. Knitted stockings, or, as they were originally called, stocking hose, were introduced into Britain in the Sixteenth century, and those of silk were considered such a luxury that they were thought a present fit for a king, so we find Sir Thomas Gresham presenting a pair of long Spanish silk hose to Edward VI.

Thunderstorms

The thunderstorm is owing to the rapid vertical convection of air containing a large amount of water vapor. The lower air must, therefore, be rather warm, say 70 degrees F. or over, else it would not carry the requisite amount of water vapor, and the temperature must decrease rather rapidly with increase of height, else there would be but little or no convection. Now, in the summer time the humidity in Oregon and Washington is rather low. Hence thunderstorms generally are improbable. In the winter time, when most of the rains come, the surface commonly is too cool to set up vigorous vertical convection. Hence thunderstorms are not likely. Thunderstorms are not frequent in Oregon and Washington any time of the year. Thunderstorms occur very infrequently in California.

Bees and Their Owners

Entomologists hold that there is nothing to the common notion that honey-bees recognize the beekeeper and distinguish him from other individuals. Although some bees hatched late in the fall survive the winter, the average life of a worker bee during the active honey season is only about six weeks, two of which are spent in the hive. It is not likely that a beekeeper would examine a hive frequently enough to be recognized by creatures with such short lives even if they had the ability to distinguish between different human beings. Good beekeepers do not provoke bees so much as others do because they are familiar with their habits and know how to handle them.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Black and Blue Spots

Those black and blue spots we sometimes find on various parts of the body are bruises. They are the most common of all injuries. Sometimes we find them and wonder how we got them. Bruises result when we receive a fall or are struck by a blunt instrument that doesn't break the skin. If the injury is slight no treatment is necessary, but cold compresses will help. In severe bruises apply the cold compresses, elevate the injured part to diminish the pain, then apply witch-hazel or some other soothing lotion. Be sure it is only a bruise and that no bones are broken.—Exchange.

Believed to be the oldest white native son of California in northern California is Dennis C. Wood, native of Nevada County, now a resident of Lassen County. He was born Christmas Day, 1842. He has been a member of the Native Sons of the Golden West for forty-four years and is a former sheriff of Lassen County.

Working with home-made equipment, H. V. Underwood, pioneer metallurgist, and Edward Matthews are extracting "pay dirt" in the shape of quicksilver, from the recently-located mine on the Matthews ranch, near Hollister. Underwood and Matthews, using home made retorts, are getting about 2 per cent results out of the preliminary 25-ton ore taken out. With mercury at $1.85 a pound, a comfortable yield is being taken from the property.

The Treasury Department has about decided to abandon the project of a new postoffice at Modesto because of an alleged exorbitant price asked by owners of the land, Acting United States Attorney I. M. Peckham said. According to William Arthur Newman federal architect, the site wanted is assessed at a valuation of $2000 and the government has offered $14,000 for it, but Carl Shannon, owner, wants $30,000.

Despite California's abnormally low fire loss this season, State Forester M. B. Pratt appealed for extra vigilance during the remainder of the year. Some of our most serious fires have occurred as late as November, he warned. Fire damage to timber so far this season has totaled $5103, the lowest on record in California. The loss for the same period of time last year was $96,392.

Rapid growth of California as shown by the 1930 census played an important part in making the state death rate lower, Dr. Walter M. Dickie, director of public health, said. The 1929 death rate, based on population estimates from the previous census, was 14.7 per 1000 population, but on the basis of the 1930 census figures the rate was 11.9 per 1000. The figures indicate the general health conditions in California are especially good and that, in spite of the heavy migration of invalids to the state, the death rate is lower than for many other states in the Union, Dr. Dickie said.

ONE EYE ON THE JOB

That a weage-earner, whether a laborer or industrial executive, should seek through any legitimate means to better his condition is entirely commmendable. But too many seek for such betterment in distant fields, when the real opportunity lies in the present job.

Every employer has to deal with the fellow who no sooner gets located in a position than he begins to look for something better elsewhere. He has one eye on his present job and the other one on a new one.

In a majority of cases, particularly if one is working for a sound and reputable concern, an employee would be far better off to concentrate his thoughts and energies on the work he is doing, instead of watching the "help wanted" advertisements.

No intelligent employer wants to lose a man who shows efficiency in his work and loyalty to his concern. The rewards of such efficiency and loyalty will generally be in keeping with the employee's merit.

But when an employer knows that an employee is continually looking for another position, it is taken as evidence that only half-hearted service is being rendered, and the employer begins to look for someone to take his place. The fellow whg keeps both eyes on his job usually profits most in the long run.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

The first line of defense against fire in any community is the fire department. Its efficiency may determine whether a blaze shall be quickly subdued, with a minimum loss, or whether it shall become a roaring, destructive conflagration.

Our modern fire departments present an interesting contrast to those of ancient times. It was not until after the great London fire of 1666 that fire fighting was given serious study and organized fire departments created.

In this country the first public fire fighting organizations of importance were the volunteer "fire societies," which combined perparedness for fire with social diversions. The first successful steam pumping engine was adopted and used by Cincinnatti, Ohio, in 1853.

Nowadays the up-to-date fire department is equipped with deluge sets, turret pipes and water towers capable of projecting streams of water as high as eight stories from the ground. Vast progress has been made in the perfection of our fire fighting facilities, and they are still in a process of evolution. Every American community, large or small, has found that a high-class fire fighting organization, well equipped, is one of the best possible investments.

END OF A GREAT SHIP

After carrying the Stars and Stripes under three names—New York, Saratoga, Rochester—for 37 years, one of the proudest ships of the American Navy is now doomed to the scrap heap.

As the New York, she was Admiral Sampson's flagship at Santiago; later flying the flag of Fighting Bob Evans, she entertained the German emperor at Kiel; she was the pride of the Navy in Asiatic waters.

She gave up her name to a new battleship and became the Saratoga, taking her place in the ranks of obsolescent vessels. Still later she yielded her name to tthe great aircraft carrier Saratoga, was rechristened the Rochester, and as such will go to her doom.

As a last gesture, as if to remind the nation of her past glory, the Rochester this year won the battle efficiency pennant for cruisers of the second line.

But her fighting and cruising days are over. Too old to oppose modern craft, too slow for other effective service, she must pass from the Navy list—and she goes proudly—a pennant of victory streaming from her mast.

AN EXCELLENT RECORD

Manufacturers of products with established reputations are keenly alive to the damage which may be done to their businesses by substitutions on tthe part of unscrupulous jobbers or dealers. Therefore every possible means is sought to protect themselves and the public against irregular practices.

An interesting and highly successflu plan for preventing substitutions is reported by an association of 28 refiners and 580 jobbers handling Pennsylvania grade crude oil. This plan, adopted two years ago, calls for a forfeiture of $1,000 in case of a breach of the pledge made to protect the public and the members themselves against any practices which might tend to destroy confidence in the high quality of oils sold under private brands bearing the association's emblem.

It is said that during the two years in which the plan has been in operation there has not been a single forfeiture or prosecution against any of the bonded companies or individuals concerned.

This is an excellent record, and one which may hold a valuable suggestion for manufacturers of other products whose reputations may be menaced from time to time by the substitution evil.

THE GREATEST BANKS

Mergers of banks have paralleled mergers of great industrial and business systems in recent years, with the result that the world's ten largest banks now have deposits aggregating nearly 15 billion dollars.

Largest of all is the Chase National of New York, with more than two billion of deposits, followed by the Midland of London with 1,838 million, Barclay of London with 1,643 million, National City of New York with 1,560, Westminster of London with 1,433, Guaranty Trust of New York with 1,379, National Provincial of London with 1,341, Lloyds of London with 1,266, Continental Illinois of Chicago with 908, and Bank of Italy of North America with 824 million.

Thus it will be seen that of these ten largest banks five are in the United States and five in London.

The deposits of the Chase bank are greater than the combined deposits of all the national banks in the United States at the time of the Spanish-American War. On June 30,1898, there were 3,589 national banks with total deposits of $2,023,357,160. On June 30, 1930, deposits of the Chase bank alone were $2,065,434,799.

BOON TO HARD-OF HEARING

She cannot gossip across the back fence, but she can visit with friends across the continent—

Unreasonable as it seems, that is the situation of the hard-of-hearing lady who cannot hear friends in the same room, but at the telephone she can talk with any one of 30,000,000 other telephones anywhere in the world.

For this woman, like scores on the Pacific Coast, has a miniature sound amplifier on her telephone. The attachment is rented to her by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., at a rate which Manager L. M. Brown announced yesterday, has been reduced from $3.50 per month to $2.

The miniature amplifier is tuned up or down, like a radio, for the right volume of sound in the telephone receiver. Its principle is similar to the radio, but instead of using large vacuum tubes, it has a single "peanut" tube, one of the tiniest in existence.

About 100 of these sets are in service in Northern California, about half of that number in San Francisco.

A dispatch says "General Pershing has accepted an invitation to be a distinguished guest." In fact, he could hardly be any other kind.

FRIENDS OF WILD LIFE

Everyone who loves animals and birds will rejoice at a recent announcement concerning the Wild Life Association, a new organization endowed by Joseph Palmer Knapp, famous New York magazine publisher.

The association will have an initial endowment of five million dollars, which will probably be increased to ten million, and has for its object the protection and conservation of American wild life.

A most pleasing feature of the announcement is that Senator Harry B. Hawes, of Missouri, will become the active head of the organization at the expiration of his term as United States Senator in March, 1933. In the meantime he will direct the preliminary work of the association. Senator Hawes is one of the foremost figures in the mvement for wild life protection, being the author of several works on various phases of the subject, and a representative of the Senate on the migratory bird conservation commission. He is a widely known sportsman and an outstanding authority on wild life.

Mr. Knapp's generosity in providing such a liberal endowment for this important conservation movement is most commendable, and it is fortunate that he will have Senator Hawes in active control of the work. The efforts of these distinguished friends of American wild life should have the hearty co-opeartion of press and public.

HARD TIMES SAVINGS

Savings deposits are about the poorest barometer of prosperity, according to a statement by the Federal Reserve Board, which shows that savings accounts in member banks are greater now than in the early part of the boom year 1929.

Several reasons are given for this situation. One is that people are more disposed to pinch and save in dull times, another is that much money which might be used for purchases of securities in normal times is now placed on time deposit. When people are reluctant to make new improvements or investments they are inclined to use the savings account as a means of obtaining at least a small return on their cash capital.

Therefore, little can be judged concerning general conditions by the amount of savings deposits at any given time.

CARILLON OF 72 BELLS

This month the largest carillon in the world was installed in the tower of the four million dollar Riverside Church in New York. It has 72 bells with a range of six octaves, the largest bell weighing 20 tons.

The carillon tower is 360 feet high, into which the bells were hoisted by electricity, using steel cables. Three bells in the world are larger than the big brass bell of the carillon, but it has the deepest tone. It is about eight feet high, its clapper alone weighing as much as the Liberty Bell, about a ton.

The tower and carillon are the gift of John D. Rockefeller Jr. He and his father are the largest contributors to the new church, of which Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick will be the pastor when it is opened for worship in October.

Riverside Church, with its great carillon, will be a notable addition to the many fine religious edifices of the nation's metropolis.

SCRAMBLED SLOGANS

Here is a nice parlor game. Have written on slips of paper certain advertising slogans. On another set of slips writes the names of the various advertisers concerned. Mix each set in a hat or other receptacle and draw one slip from each and compare. Here are some of the results reported by a contemporary:

"Eventually, Why Not Now?"—National Funeral Directors' Association.

"Good to tthe Last Drop"—Haviland China.

Has the Strength of Gibraltar"—Brookfield Butter.

"Hams What Am" — Famous-Lasky Players.

"The Danger Line"—Pennsylvania Railroad.

"The Flavor Lasts"—Squibb's Tasteless Castor Oil.

GAS USE GROWING

An interesting aspect of American progress is the tremendous increase in the amount of gas used for home heating.

In 1927, according to a recent report, 12 billion cubic feet of manufactured gas was used for this purpose, and in 1929, 27 billion cubic feet—an increase of more than 125 per cent in two years. The records for 1930 will undoubtedly show another great increase.

The figures tell a remarkable story of domestic progress. The American home owner has received gas with enthusiasm because of its efficiency, economy, cleanliness and adaptability to automatic control. It may be that in a few years the home without an automatic heating system will be as rare as today's home without electric lights.

TELEGRAMS AND GAS

It was recently noted that gasoline filling stations were branching into other lines by adding tires, tobacco and cigarettes, sandwiches, cold drinks and even books to their stock in trade.

Now it is announced that they are to become branch offices for telegraph companies, where tourists and others may file telegrams. In some cases written messages will be delivered to telegraph offices by filling station attendants; in others the sender may use a slot telephone into which his toll may be deposited.

It is reported that one telegraph company has arranged for 3,500 filling station branches under this plan and is negotiating for 2,500 more, while another company will arrange for 3,000.

The new system will be advantageous to persons living in many rural communities as well as to tourists, it is believed. At the same time, greater convenience in telegraphing will doubtless increase this method of communication very materially, which is naturally what the companies have in mind.

The season's most unusual bootlegging case is reported from New York. Bishop Charles Mrenza of the Czecho-Slovakian Orthodox Church in that city was sentenced to a year in Atlanta prison for violating the prohibition law. He was convicted of inducing young priests under his charge to withdraw large quantities of sacramental wine, which was later sold at a good profit.

The discovery that rats are afflicted with a disease which appears to be the same as human leprosy will make it easier for scientists to make experimental studies of this dread disease.

An electrical treatment has recently been discovered for labor and bronchial pneumonia and it is so overwhelmingly positive in 200 tests that it is "virtually a specific."

Some give according to their means; others according to their meanness.

TOWN BEAUTY AN ASSET

In spite of the apparent commercialism of the age in which we live, it is evident to any observer that the American people are developing a greater appreciation of the beautiful. This is not confined to the wealthier classes, but extends to the great masses in the towns and villages, and in the rural districts.

New towns and new sections of the older ones are being laid out with wider streets, with provision for larger lawns, more trees, shrubbery and flowers, and a more attractive setting generally.

New houses show better architecture and greater harmony with their surroundings, while unsightly yard fences have largely disappeared. The net result of all these modern developments is beauty. And aside from the satisfaction which it affords the eye, it pays in dollars and cents.

Beautiful cities, towns and villages attract people. They attract permanent residents, they attract tourists, and they attract trade. It is natural that a person selecting a trading center will choose a town that is beautiful and clean in preference to one that is unsightly and dirty, if other conditions are anywhere near equal.

Therefore it behooves the authorities of any community, as well as each individual citizen, to make the most of their opportunities for improving the appearance of the place in which they live. Beauty and cleanliness are a town's best assets.

Aime's "four-square gospel" would appeal to more people if it guaranteed four square meals a day.

Real spirits were discovered in a South Carolina cemetery. A moonshiner had established his still there.

We read of a singer whose voice filled the hall so completely that the audience walked out to give it room.

Sometimes the father gives the bride away; in other cases the bridegroom has to find out for himself.

SIDELIGHTS

To nominate the Democratic state and congressional ticket in Vermont cost only $1.80, according to the official report of expenditures. And, Vermont's voting habits being what they are, the nominations cost more than they are worth, at that.

Asserting that cannibals will not eat a man who has used tobacco, a reformer asks if that is not a potent argument against the filthy weed. To which the Macon Telegraph retorts: "No, who is going to do without tobacco just to pamper a cannibal?"

For the fifth time gallant Sir Thomas Lipton has failed to lift the America's cup, his latest challenger, the Shamrock, having been defeated in four straight races by the American sloop Enterprise. He is now 81 years old and will probably abandon his efforts to capture the coveted trophy, begun 31 years ago. His fine sportsmanship has won the admiration of the world, however, and the esteem in which he is held by his fellowmen is worth more than a hundred prize cups.

Among the many races on land, water and in the air, one of the oddest is the annual turtle derby held at 101 Ranch at Ponca City, Okla. The competing turtles are released from an enclosure in the center of a big circle, the prize going to the one which crosses the outer line of the circle first. This year several thousand turtles were entered, first prize of $7,100 being won by Goober Dust, owned by Mrs. Cora M. Day, of Ponca City.

Out of the spotlight: Ruth Law, famed stunt flyer, is now Mrs. Oliver Hudson, housewife; Gene Tunney is connected with a car wheel factory; Gertrude Ederle, first woman to swim the English Channel, is a swimming instructor at $75 a week.

Gallant Fox, winner of this year's Kentucky Derby and other famous stakes, has won more money than any other American racehorse, $317,865. His winnings have been slightly exceeded by only two horses in the history of the turf, Ksar and Mon Talisman, both French. Earl Sande is the jockey who piloted Gallant Fox to his famous victories.

Seldom has the irony of fate been illustrated more strikingly than in the recent death of Van Lear Black, millionaire Baltimore publisher and aviation enthusiast. After flying about 125,000 miles over some of the most desolate parts of the world without serious accident, he fell from his favorite perch on the rail of his yacht and was drowned.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

That whenever you send your money away from home you lose, your neighbor loses and your home town loses.

Every dollar spent in your home town comes back to you or your neighbor, directly or indirectly.

Your dollars spent at home stay at home working for the home town, morning, noon and night.

You should spend your money with your home merchants so it will aid in making a bigger, better, busier home town. Dollars spent at home make it possible for your local merchants to carry bigger stocks, to increase payrolls and to aid in civic improvements.

Dollars spent in your own home city help to build it, while money spent away helps to build some other city. Help build your own town.

Towns do not grow by accident—they are built by men and women, with the aid of capital. Spending your money at home keeps home capital working to build the home town.

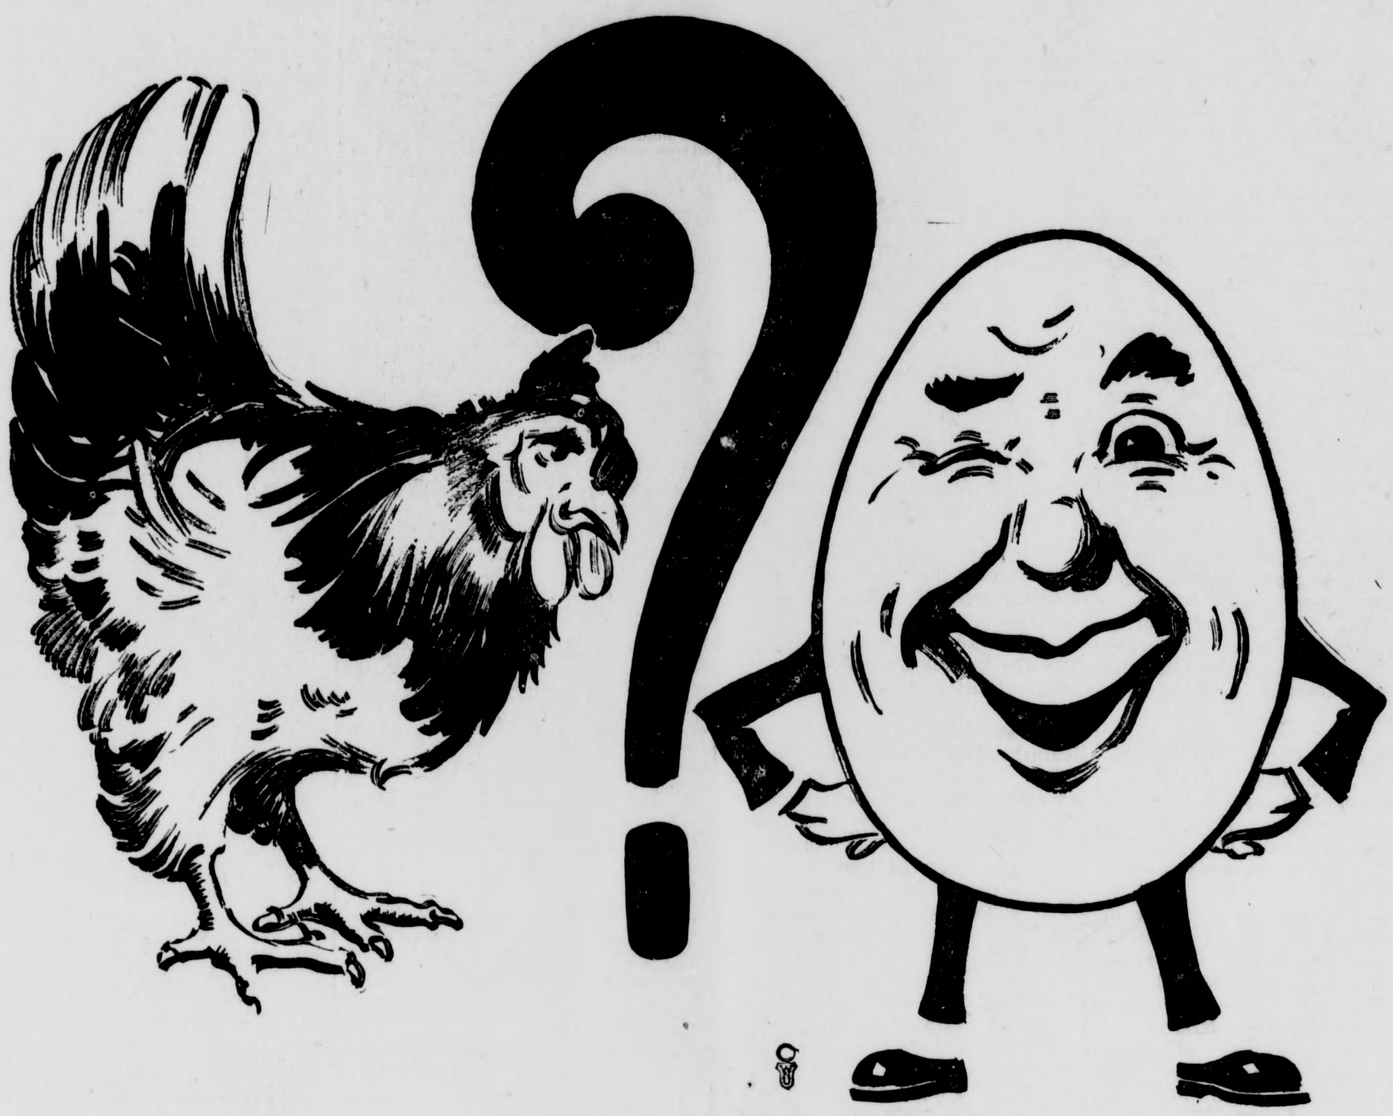
Which Comes First . . . The Hen or the Egg?



What is the answer?

Does the hen get the credit for producing the egg—or the egg for producing the hen?

The question has troubled a lot of people for the last several hundred years.

While all this argument has been going on, however, the hens have continued to lay eggs and the eggs to hatch hens.

THEY HAVE ACCOMPLISHED SOMETHING.

And each is necessary to the other.

. . . Which brings us to the subject of community teamwork . . .

ARE THE HEN-LAYING, EGG-HATCHING COMBINATIONS IN OUR COMMUNITY PRODUCING FOR OUR ADVANCEMENT?

A lack of teamwork has kept more communities from the progress they should make than any other single factor. Few towns rate more than half as well as they should because of lack of concerted community effort.

When the various business, social, educational and religious organizations function as separate, independent units, regardless of the splendid work of each, if they are not coördinated—"keyed in" with each other, they lose most of their effectiveness.

No one community ever may attain perfection. Schools can always be improved—Business can always be better; standards of living higher. Every factor in every community can always stand improvement.

It must be remembered that everything in our town depends on everything else. We are made up of many parts—each serving an individual purpose, but all closely related and inter-dependent. Strength of one is strength of all; weakness of one, weakness of all. Therefore every factor must be strong!

Where to begin to make stronger?

By discovering the spots most in need of reënforcement. Some factors are more vital to our community than others and require first attention. FIRST THINGS FIRST!

Futile argument as to which factor comes first dissipates the energy that should go into the teamwork.

Remember, it will never be decided which comes first—the hen or the egg—we only know that THE TEAMWORK OPERATION PRODUCES PROGRESS AND RESULTS!!

More teamwork and unification of effort will help each of us and strengthen

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

MARCHBANK FIRST TO SHIP GALLOPERS TO LOCAL COURSE

With the inbred Hampton colt, Mopeco, as "headliner," the racing string of John W. Marchbank is undergoing intensive preparation at Tanforan for the meet to open the middle of November. The thoroughbreds from Heather Farm were vanned over under the direction of Trainer H. W. ("Frisco") Hoag and were the pioneers for the coming period of sport.

The Contra Costa county breeder was handicapped last spring by the lack of a capable jockey, so has been conducting a comprehensive search throughout the country for riders that will come near to measuring up to the high standard that is likely to rule at the fall meeting. Fortunately he had the opportunity of signing up John Maiben, for a long time a leading saddle artist on the Metropolitan circuit, and Willie Kern, for some time with Trainer Kay Spence of Audley Farm.

Maiben makes his home out this way and on the wind-up of the sport on the big time will report to the Marchbank establishment. He has steered many a horse for "Frisco" Hoag when that astute conditioner had other stables, and the jockey and trainer understand each other perfectly. It certainly looke as though Owner Marchbank made a ten strike in acquiring the services of the mild mannered "Johnny."

Willie Kern is well known in the West, as Terry O'Malley has brought him out here for the Audley Farm. He should go well at the Tanforan meet. His contract was purchased from B. B. Jones, with Kay Spence acting as negotiator of the transfer from the Audley Farm Stable to Marchbank.

With a dozen or more of the colts and fillies bred at Heather Farm as his companions, the French youngster, Mopeco, by McKinley, from Sonelida, has made himself perfectly at home over at Walnut Creek and the last few days at Tanforan. He is coming on famously and may be ready for the important races for his age at the fall session.

Such is the delighted expression of fans of both sexes when the Gallic thoroughbred is led out for inspection of friends of his proud owner. The colt has the manner of the bluest of the blue bloods of his kind and his every movement suggests he is going to be a real topnotcher.

McKinley, grandson of the popular Bay Ronald, was a high class performer in Spain and France and has a way of transmitting his speed and stamina to his progeny. The stallion has what is known as staying blood on both sides, as has Sonelida, the dam of the colt. Sonelida's sire, Son in Law, won the Cesarewitch at two miles and two furlongs and was one of the greatest stayers ever bred in England. If ever there was a colt bred to go on and on it is this same Mopeco.

HUGHES TO TALK AT RED CROSS MEETING

Delegates from 28 Bay region chapters of the American Red Cross will assemble in San Francisco on October 7 for a one-day regional conference to be held in the Fairmont Hotel. Beginning at 9.30 A. M., the conference will include a luncheon at the Fairmont and an afternoon session. Miss Edith Waterman, of San Rafael, chairman of Marin County Chapter, will preside.

A special feature of the conference will be the attendance of H. J. Hughes, of Washington, D. C., legal advisor of the American Red Cross, who is making his first tour of Pacific Coast chapters. Hughes will address the conference luncheon on the subject: "The Red Cross: A National Organization with National Supervision."

The principal morning address will be given by John N. Zydeman, Red Cross liaison representative with the Seattle regional office of the Veterans' Bureau, on "Recent Changes in Veterans' Bureau Legislation." Discussion of this subject will be led by R. E. Arne, assistant national director of war service. This will be followed by a report of the Junior Red Cross section of the Red Cross convention held in Washington in May, which will be given by Reid Whiting, delegate to the convention from Livermore High School.

An interesting feature of the morning session will be a life-saving demonstration conducted by Edwin H. Carroll, assistant national director of first aid and life-saving.

The afternoon session will open with a formal Roll Call skit directed by Miss Marianne Kin, assistant national director of public information and roll call. The volunteer service activities of Pacific Coast chapters will be discussed by Mrs. Katherine Simons, volunteer service secretary for the Pacific branch. An independent conference of Junior Red Cross members will be held in the afternoon, attended by students from high and junior high schools of the Bay region and presided over by a Junior delegate.

All sessions of the conference are open too the public, to which a cordial invitation is extended by the Pacific Branch Office. Reservations for the luncheon may be made by communicating with J. Arthur Jeffers, manager of the Pacific Branch, at the Civic Auditorium, San Francisco.

SAFETY CAMPAIGN DEVOTED TO "STOP" AND "GO" SIGNALS

Familiarity with the "Stop" and "Go" signals regulating traffic at busy intersections has caused a certain proportion of motorists to become lax in observing the devices or wilfully disregarding them, according to the California Committee on Public Safety. As a result, the committee announces that careful obedience to such signals has been selected as the subject of its October safety campaign.

The committee will devote its efforts during the month to educating motorists regarding the importance of closely obeying the signals and impressing them with the fact that such means of control are for their own benefit.

Accompanied by a state-wide heralding of the phrase, "Traffic signals are for protection—obey their directions," as a slogan expressing the spirit of the month's activities, the committee will direct an intensive effort toward stricter observance of the signals. The slogan will be broadcast by radio, displayed on moving picture screens and street car posters, and emphasized through the press, service clubs and other mediums.

Observations made in preparation for the campaign were declared to indicate that ignoring the signals or failure to comply with them promptly is in most cases the result of inattention on the part of the motorist, although a certain amount of deliberate violation occurs.

The legal department of the California State Automobile Association, which is assisting in making the campaign effective, points out that a motorist driving through an open intersection has a right under the law to assume that traffic approaching the crossing will observe the "Stop" signal. Attention is also called to the fact that the Californa Vehicle Act confers power upon local authorities to employ automatic signals and enforce observance.

For the first ten days of the month the campaign will be directed mainly to the education features of the campaign and thereafter state traffic officers and city police departments will begin a period of strict enforcement of the laws requiring obedience to the "Stop" and "Go" signals.

REPORT SHOWS DECREASE IN FACTORY EMPLOYMENT

The September issue of the California Labor Market Bulletin, recently released by Walter G. Mathewson, Chief of the Division of Labor Statistics and Law Enforcement, shows a decrease of employment and payroll in California manufacturing establishments in August, 1930.

The bulletin shows that the same 764 representative manufacturing establishments which employed 224,671 workers in August, 1929, employed only 197,275 workers in August, 1930, a decrease of 27,396, or 12.2 per cent. The total weekly payroll for the same representative establishment was $6,830,877 in August, 1929, and $5,789,085 in August, 1930, a decrease of $1,041,877, or 15.3 per cent.

Among the goups of industries showing the largest decreases in employment in August, 1930, compared with August, 1929, were leather and rubber goods, 32.8 per cent; wood manufactures, 23.7 per cent; chemicals, oils, and paints, including petroleum producing and refining, 22.3 per cent; stone, clay, and glass products, 21.2 per cent; metals, machinery, and conveyances, 19.3 per cent; clothing, millinery, and laundry, 12.1 per cent; and textile products, 10.4 per cent.

An increase of 8 per cent in employment in August, 1930, compared with August, 1929, is shown in the bulletin for foods, beverages, and tobacco.

The same twenty-seven public utilities which employed 28,146 workers in August, 1929, employed 29,326 workers in August, 1930, an increase of 1,180, or 4.2 per cent.

The average weekly earnings of factory workers in California in August, 1930, were $29.35, compared with $30.40 in August, 1929.

THE SPORT OF KINGS AT MONTEREY FAIR

Steeplechasing, the true sport of kings, and the most thrilling, colorful, exciting of all racing, will be given a great ovation at its first appearance on the Pacific Coast. For five days—from October 8 to 12—the new tack that is being especially prepared for Monterey county's first annual fair, the pick of America's thoroughbred jumpers and race horses will draw thousands of spectators to Monterey to witness the sport which for countless decades has been the treasured feature of exclusive hunt clubs in England and eastern United States.

Already horses are arriving on the grounds—coming from the famous tracks of Chicago, New Orleans, Belmont, and Montreal, Agua Caliente, and the blue-grass courses of Kentucky. They will compete not only in steeplechase events, but in the many flat races that will be held each day.

More than one hundred and fifty horses are expected to take part in the five gala days of racing. The fair will also bring spectators from throughout the state to witness the display of the prize-winning agriultural products of Monterey and its neighboring counties. Championship livestock—horses, and cattle, hogs and sheep—will also attract many enthusiasts, as well as the pompous rooseters, ducks, turkeys and bantams in the poultry exhibits.

There's Real Joy in Living When You Own Your Own Home.

Come in! Let's talk things over. See if we can't work out some arrangement that will appeal to you as the logical solution of your particular problem.

Bullets Not Ballots

Pedro: "So our man lost the Mexican presidential nomination."

Arturi: "Yes, he was dropped on the twenty-first bullet."

Client: "I reckon you won't charge me anything for asking a question?"

Lawyer: "Oh, no. The only expense involved will be in requiring me to give you an answer."

Same Scenery

A negro stoker was crossing the Atlantic for the first time. One day, when he came upon deck to get a breath of air, he looked about over the broad expanse of water with no object in sight, and said in disgruntled tones:

"Gosh, we is right whar we was dis time yistiday!"

Better than Just Good Enough. — Try our Aberdeen Coal.

There are too many men who are always fairly good; they are not even much of a success as a failure.

Perfect Safety

Fugitive: "Quick! The poice are after me. Where can I find a place to hide?"

Office Manager: "Jump into the filing cabinet. No one can ever find anything there."

Laws are things that tell us we must not do a lot of things that we wouldn't do anyway and a few other things that we must not do that we do anyway.

Salesman: "How much is Bill Jones good for?"

Credit Man: "Does he own an automobile?"

Salesman: "No."

Credit Man: "Let him have all he wants."
